MOTHS,

also known as night butterflies,
are members of the order lepidoptera
that are not butterflies.
It reunites species of nightly flight,
different from butterflies.

In some regions, bigger and darker colored species are called

WITCHES.

What distinguishes moths from butterflies
is that butterflies have slim antennae,
with a small orb at the tip,
unlike moths who have different antennae
according to each type and species.

Moths, when they land, leave their wings open - butterflies mantain their wings vertical.

MOTHS ARE NOT BUTTERFLIES.

Moths are attracted to light.
They are frequently seen
circling artificial light.
The reason for this is UNKNOWN.

A hypothesis is that moths navigate through maintaining an angular relation
to a light source, such as the moon.

Light pollution caused by artificial light
has caused a severe decline in moth population.

Moths are important, but overlooked,
natural pollinators.

Some moths are farmed for their

ECONOMIC VALUE.

The silk industry produces more than 250 million U.S. dollars per year.

Some moths are used as food,
harvested and sold and shipped
from one country to another.

MOTHS HAVE MANY PREDATORS.

(c) hyamora

They are known to devour fabric.
They are known to devour plants.
They are known to drink nectar.

THEY ARE KNOWN TO DEVOUR.

Their larvae may be killed
by freezing their food at a certain degree
below 0C°.

It's best to maintain them
in a stable time loop,
where they will forever be trapped.

In many parts of the world,

MOTHS ARE KNOWN AS PESTS.

Right you are.
So how does your little game work?
You're fit enough to be a Traveler.
Know how to fight, don't you?
Our CHALLENGE is worldly renowned and is state-wide, princess.
Don't underestimate it, or its sacred story.

A long, long time ago,
a HAUNTED CASTLE emerged
from the depths of the world's core.
This CASTLE is full of many creatures
who like to mask as HUMANS.
They used to be,
once upon a time.
But living in the castle
has mutated them into
gross SHELLS of themselves.
anyone
who enters
is at risk
of being
devoured.
To survive in this environment,
they need HUMAN FLESH.
